DR. PLAYFAIR, the distinguished Chemist and Physicist, in a letter to Lord Taunton, laments the absence in England of industrial progress during the past ten years, as compared with what is observed in other countries. He formed his opinion after careful observation at Paris, and a free interchange of views with distinguished men from all parts of Europe; and ascribes this failure of progress in the inventive arts to the absence of a good system of industrial education, such as is found in France, Austria, Prussia, Belgium and Switzerland, for the masters and managers of factories and workshops. Dr. PLAYFAIR further says: "Dumas, well known as a savant, and who, from his position as a Senator of France and President of the Municipal Council, has many opportunities of forming a correct judgment, assured me that technical education had given a great impulse to the industry of France. In going through the Exhibition, whenever anything excellent in French manufacture strikes his attention, his invariable question is, "Was the manager of this establishment a pupil of the Ecots Centrals des Arts et Man sfactures ? and in the great majority of cases he received a reply in the affirmative. General MORIN, so well known as the Director of the Conservatoire des Arts et Metiers, has lately sat on a commission to examine into the state of technical education in other countries, and to extend it in France, and he informed me that their ecommendations were likely to be promptly and largely acted upon. I mention for your lordship's formation that General Morra was of opinion that the best system for the technical education o workmen is to be found in Austria, though the higher instruction of masters and managers is better illustrated in France, Prussis and Switzerland. In 1853 I published a little work on Industria Education on the Continent,' in which I pointed out that as an inevitable result of the attention given to it abroad, and its neglect in England, other nations must advance in industry at a much greater rate than our own country. I fear that this result is already attained for many of our staple industries. But as my opinion is only that of an individual, I trust that it may accord with the objects of the commission over which your lordship presides to take the evidence of some of the leading jurors, many of whom had as good opportuni-ties as myself of judging of the position which our sired. We have seen frequent allusions of late to this species of demondatry, but know not how much credit is to be attached to it. We have leard some very strange, stories recently about the revival and spread of "Obi" worship, or the horrid rites of African Fetichism, among the negross in some parts of the South, and especially in Louisians and Alabams, and the regions bordering on the Gulf of Mexico. We should like to get from the Southern press or Southern mission aries some facts on this interesting subject, though nots are doubtless hard to get, because of the secreey with which the blacks carry on the "Obl" rites. During the prevalence of slavery, the impossibility of the negroes getting away from the plantations or from the towns at night, made these rites extremely rare, and almost terminated them among all the Africans in America. But now the negroes have no check upon their gathering in their secret haunts during the night, and as a consequence the "Obl" men are beginning to renew their practices. It is well known that this heathenish "Ohi" worship has now a profound hold upon the negro race u Hayti, and in that quarter is mixed up in the most shooking manner with the Christian forms of worship that used to prevail upon the island. The Cross and the Mumbe Jumbo are worshipped together, and the sacred Biblical names are joined with those of cannibal gods. What we have heard of Oblism in the South s somewhat of the same nature. We have no doubt that some of the Methodist and Baptist nissionaries among the Southern blacks could give information as to the revival of this barbario orship. The Southern papers, too, might perhaps be able to throw light on the subject.

Her books are decidedly sensational, but for all that they are good, and despite the seeming immorality of some hapters, all contain a fair moral. "Granville de Vigne" is, we think the best of her works; the best, because more probable and less sensational. For a long time the authorship of these powerful works was a secret, and every one supposed that Ouida was a man. The somewhat "horsey," bold style and freedom of expression led people to suppose that some thorough man-of-the-world was the writer; but the bitter attacks upon women, (women are always hard on their own sex,) and the nice descriptions of feminine graces, wiles and toilets, argued in favor of a female writer. At ength it came out that Ouida was Miss DE LA RAME, a young lady residing in London, and by no means as fast as one would su-pose from read-ing her works. On the ground of morality, some of Quida's books have been severely censured, but it must be confessed that the lessons taught, and the morals drawn, are all in favor of morality, virtue and good society."

> THE MOST NOTEWORTHY circumstance about the attempt on the Czar's life in the Bois de Boulogne. s, now that we know the facts, its failure. It is the last of a remarkable series of failures. I failed as did the previous effort to take the Czar's life in St. Petersburg, as did the attempt against BISMARCK, the attempt against the King of Prussia, the attempt against the Emperor of Austria the two attempts against Louis Perilippe, the two attempts against Naponson, and, in a word, as have failed all the recent plots to murder the polentates who govern Europe. So uniform has been this issue of such schemes, that a cynical theory was once started that NapoLeon hired men to play the role of assassins, so as to gain popular sympathy. True, it is that Kings and Ministers have fallen a prey by secres to the assassin, within the last few centuries. HENRY IV. and Louis XV. of France both fell in their coaches in the streets of Paris, the former by the dagger of RAVAILLAC, the latter by that of DAMIENS. HENEY III., GUSTAVUS III. and Gustavus the Great, the Dukes of Guise and BERRI, of France, and BUCKINGHAM, of England, MURBAY, of Scotland-these and other monarchs and Ministers as powerful as monarchs, have been victims of assassination, while our own President LINCOLN ends the fatal list. Nevertheless, of late, not one in twenty of regicidal plots have succeeded, and the fact is suggestive. We sturdy Republicans need not agree with CLAUDIUS that "there's such divinity doth hedge a King that treason can but peep at what it would." But surely there is something extraordinary in the repested warding off of death, of late, from Soverel

In Rome, the capital of Catholic Christendom, the Pope has prepared a display which will surpass anything in the recent history of Papacy. The anniversary of the martyrdom of PETER and PAUL is to be celebrated with all the pomp and splendor of which Rome is capable, The dignitaries of the Catholic Church from all quarters and countries of the world are now assembling round the Holy Father, bearing with them golden gifts and costly presents, which are to be laid at his feet; and, judging by the numbers who have gone from this country, we may form some idea of the array which will appear on and a variety of other things are to be done, too numerous to mention. When the day arrives and the ceremonies begin, there will be a sacred and scenic display such as can be gotten up nowhere

RY'S OPINION. We publish to-day a telegraphic synopsis of Mr. Attorney-General STANSBERRY's Opinion as to the power and duties of the Military Commanders. What he says, or rather what the telegraph says for him, seems clear and proper, and while we shall endeavor to analyse for our readers the prominent features of the Military Bill, and so to enlighten them upon its provisions, we will, at the same time indicate what seems to us the proper course for them, under the circumstances, to pursue.

We do not question the motive, far from it. we are quite willing to acknowledge the good intention of those who in other States, whether as law officers, the conductors of public WE PUBLISH the following from the New York journals, or in any other capacity, entertain a Times, with a view of eliciting the information deof the other States, now undergoing the process of reconstruction. But however good the motive which prompts their interference, we have no doubt that many of their suggestions will, if adopted, more surely defeat the result they express a desire to accomplish, and produce additional suffering to the people, whose present condition they profess an earnest wish to alleviate. To many of the journals North, we very willingly give oredit for the wise and dispassionate counsel they gave to these States, many months since. At that time, when they advised an acceptance of the terms of restoration then proposed by Congress, the people of the States, no matter by what onsiderations they were influenced, rejected the friendly warning that was given. We can refer to the Times in New York, as we can to Mr. SHERMAN of Ohlo, as descriptive of the journals and of the statesmen, whose advice States to abolish, modify, control or supersede fell unheeded. And the people of these States have learned-certainly they should learn by the Act is the military authority of the United this time-how great was their misfortune in being then heedless of what was said. And him, we suppose, upon whom is devolved rewhen they were told, that if they refused the terms then offered, others more severe would be imposed in addition to those then presented, they believed it not. A few short months have sufficed to banish their incredulity, and they can see and feel that the truth was then spoken, though they did not believe it. At this time, and under the circumstances which surround us, we have had occasion for as if we were enacting this law: we are simply much surprise at the strange condition of reading it as it is written. We are simply dethose who then advised us, which, if successful in its accomplishment, will do infinitely more to provoke the antagonism of Congress derstood as saying that these officers so assignto the restoration of these States, than all else which has preceded. And their interference what they leave undone. What we do wish, is well calculated to produce that doubt, mistrust and division among themselves, which will most surely result in producing consequetices which will go far to ace polish the political, financial and social ruin c. .ne people of these States. We write after calm, careful, deliberate reflection. We give utterance to no idle apprehension-but to correct and most responsible direction with which

When, therefore, the operation of these measures was threatened with an interruption by the appeal made to the Supreme Court, we gave no favor or countenance to the effort. We did not believe that the Supreme Court would or could entertain the case which was made. We did not believe that if a majority of the justices of that court did think that they had the power to interfere, their decree would be productive of the smallest benefit. Our opinion as to the question of jurisdiction has been settled by the judgment of the court. Our apprehensions of OF THE GEORGIA STATE LOTIERY TICKETS FOR the benefit of the Masonic Orphans' Home, Class the consequences of a judgment, if favorable to the petitioner, has been seen in the distraction which to some extent has been already produced in the minds of some by the agitation of the question. Other parties than those who suggested this appeal to the Supreme Court are, however, now engaged in other efforts, which in their results will be quite as mischievous. And the discussion of what is intended by these measures of Congress; what power they confer; and how far the President is to interfere in the execution and enforcement of their provisions, seem at this moment greatly to exercise the temper of many of those who are not in the slightest degree affected by their oper-

In the appeals which are made to the President we can only see, so far as that high official is concerned, the preparation for involving him in another controversy, more violent, and more determined, than that through which he has just passed. And we do sincerely hope that he will give no heed to the counsels of those who have in the past been so little able to defend him from the assaults they have provoked. If there be one condition, more than another, which would tend to the development of a degree of confusion and disorder, that would be pregnant with the most lamentable consequences, it would be the personal and direct interference of the President in the enforcement of the provisions of what is called ESCOBEDO HAS issued an address to the Mexican | the Reconstruction Acts. We think that to the people of the States within whose limits these laws are intended to operate, as well as to the President, there is one rule of interpretation, which, by the one and the other, it is pre-eminently wise and proper, should be rigidly adhered to. PLAN OF THESE GREAT LOTTERIES AND EXPLANATION OF DRAWINGS.

The numbers from 1 to 30,000 corresponding with the numbers on the Tickets, are printed on separate slips of paper, and encircled with small tobes and placed in a glass wheel—all the prizes in accordance with the scheme, are similarly printed and encircled, and placed in another glass wheel. The wheels are then revolved, and two boys, blindfolded, draw the numbers and prizes. One of the boys draws one number from the wheel of numbers, and at the same time the other boy draws out one prize from the wheel of prizes. The number and prize drawn out are exhibited to the sudience, and whatever prize comes out is registered and placed to the credit of that number—and this operation is repeated until all the prizes are drawn out.

The Tickets are printed in the following style: They are divided into Eighths, printed on the face of the Ticket. 8 Eighths bearing the same number constitute a Whole Ticket. Prizes payable without discount.
